Papercut – a little studio with a big green vision

OWNER of Papercut graphic design, Claire Connelly has a goal: to create great design for business while at the same time remaining environmentally conscious.

“In today’s climate being environmentally responsible is becoming a requirement,” Ms Connelly said.

“We strongly believe in the value of environmentally sustainable options for our clients and offer sound advice on the topic – it’s our point of difference from our competitors.”

Papercut make green choices in every aspect of their practice, from consulting with clients about environmentally friendly design options, choosing printers with similar environmental values, using paper with recycled content and actively practising recycling and low energy use in their design studio. “As a graphic design business, we have the potential to create a lot of waste,” Ms Connelly said.

“By going green in our design studio we are helping to reduce our carbon footprint, and that of our clients.”

Papercut can design all printed material from logos and business cards to annual reports, plus all electronic media from e-cards to websites including animation. Their sustainable focus also means they can offer competitive rates providing great value for money.

“Economical, environmental and sustainable design all in one makes Papercut an industry pioneer,” Ms Connelly said.
